

ALEXANDRIA, VA.
THURSDAY EVENING, SEPTEMBER 3.

Mr. HENRY CABOT LODGE has reached the deliberative conclusion, and prints it in the current number of the Century Magazine, that in point of intellectual ability the North far exceeds the South, and that slavery is the cause thereof, as it is incompatible with a high degree of civilization, and limits the range of mental activity. Mr. Lodge arrived at this explicit conclusion by counting the names and pictures contained in a northern biographical cyclopedia, edited by a northern man, thousands of which were never heard of outside of their own townships. Why one county alone in Virginia has produced more really distinguished men than the whole State of Massachusetts, among them General Washington, Light Horse Harry Lee, Richard Henry Lee, the mover of the Declaration of Independence; Francis Lightfoot Lee, a signer of that declaration; Charles Lee, U. S. Attorney General; Arthur Lee, one of the negotiators of the French treaty in the Revolutionary War; Presidents Monroe and Madison, and the most distinguished man of the war between the States, Robert Edward Lee, all of whom were born and reared, under what Mr. Lodge calls the hideous, degrading, and dwarfing system of slavery, and all of whom were slave owners, as were all the signers of the Declaration of Independence except those from Massachusetts and one or two other States. The intellectual ability of these men is recognized throughout the civilized world, and their names will be preserved as long as history shall be printed. Mr. Lodge competes with his more famous political ally, Mr. "Johnny" Davenport, for the authorship of the Force bill. He is unquestionably scholastic, but his intellect is weak.

THE NEGRO city councilman elected by the republicans of Baltimore has raised a great fuss in that city by appointing a negro boy to a scholarship in the Maryland Institute of Art and Design. The boy will hardly be allowed to attend the school, but if he shall be, his life will be any thing else than agreeable. But his appointment has made the man who appointed him notorious, and that is glory enough for the latter. No, not a quarter of a century of freedom and free schools and suffrage has imparted understanding to the negro, nor would it extend to infinity. The Ethiopian's nature is as unchangeable as his skin.

THE COMMISSIONERS of the proposed Chicago fair, having already squandered the people's money appropriated for that fair, yesterday determined to ask Congress for an additional sum of from five to seven million dollars. As the security funds in the national treasury have now to be used in payment of the current expenses of the government, it is hardly possible that a democratic Congress will grant any such request in aid of a local affair, which the most influential and reliable newspaper in Chicago says, is being conducted in the interest of a sectional partisan organization.

Mrs. HARRISON's relatives, according to Secretary Foster's ideas, are better than the other people of the country. A government vessel was sent to meet them on their return from Europe, and to take them and their baggage from the ocean steamer and convey them to New York, where the baggage was exempt from inspection. Mrs. Astor's baggage, a few weeks before, was inspected, and some of her gowns seized and sold by order of the same Mr. Foster. At home Mr. Foster is known as "Calico Charley," and that name suits him to a t.

JUDGE HOUK, of Kansas, yesterday informed a lawyer who had argued a motion in favor of setting aside the legal foreclosure of a mortgage, that he had no case, and that if he had accepted a fee from his client he ought to be prosecuted for obtaining money under false pretenses. If all such demagogues were similarly treated the people would get along much better. Borrowers are as much benefited as lenders of money, but if borrowed money can not be recovered, no more will be lent.

THE Methodists of Kansas, Mr. Peffer's own State, many of whom supported his election to the U. S. Senate, yesterday, in conference assembled, denounced him for asserting that the Farmers' Alliance, an oath-bound political organization, has superseded the churches. Some of the Alliance people are very proper men, but it is a patent fact that they have been exceedingly unfortunate in the selection of some of their leaders.

THE prolonged delay in the resumption of navigation, and the early resumption of breaks, on the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal, are by no means conducive to the belief that the new management of that canal will be more successful, so far at least as its trade is concerned, than its predecessor.

FROM WASHINGTON.

[Special Correspondence of the Alexandria Gazette.]
WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 3, 1891.
John M. Aylor was today appointed a U. S. gauger at Dullesville, Virginia.
It is reported at the Health Office of this city to-day that Mr. M. V. Mason of Prince William county, Virginia, will be appointed to a place in that office, and that Dr. Roy of Fredericksburg, Virginia, one of the physicians to the poor, will be removed. The Doctor, however, has a strong political backing, and his friends say still has a chance of being retained.
Senator Call of Florida, who is spending the summer in this city, which he says is as healthy as any other place in the country, says he has no doubt that his re-election will be declared valid, as the U. S. Senate, in the Montana case, after discussing the question involved exhaustively, decided that a majority of a whole legislature, not of each separate branch thereof, could elect a Senator.

Mr. Draney, who contracted to collect the garbage of this city for $15,000 a year has thrown up his contract, and abandoned the work. His sureties have been informed that unless the work be resumed by noon to-morrow, the city authorities will find men to do it. Forty thousand dollars were appropriated by Congress for the work, and Draney says it cannot be done efficiently for less than that sum.

Hundreds of people have visited the 7th street wharf here to-day to view the scene of the steamboat fire this morning. The fire broke out in the boiler-room of the Corcoran, while she was moored to the wharf, about six o'clock, and in a few minutes the whole boat was enveloped in flames. Her officers and crew, who were aboard, at once cast loose her lines and jumped ashore, but instead of floating away she drifted up towards the stern of the Leary, lying at an adjacent wharf, and set that boat afire also, but the latter's crew were at work with their hose at the time washing her, and were thus enabled to keep down the flames until the tug D. M. Key attached a line to the Corcoran and towed her to the opposite side, where she was entirely consumed.

The Wakefield and Macmaster were lying in their adjoining docks, but the former was not hurt, and the latter only had the fringe around her awning burned. A small negro bootblack, named Robinson, was on the Corcoran when she was cast loose, and following the foolish advice of somebody on the wharf who told him to jump overboard, before a row boat that was coming to his relief could reach him, was drowned. His body was subsequently recovered. The Corcoran was insured for $35,000, and the Leary also, but the damage to the latter will not amount to $1,000. The Norfolk boat did not arrive until the fire was over. Had the wind been blowing from the west the conflagration would have been extensive.

A well-informed and observant correspondent of western republican newspapers who has just returned from a visit to Ohio and Indiana, says the prevailing impression on the subject among the leading republicans in both those States is that President Harrison will be re-nominated, not because he is popular with his party, but because of Mr. Blaine's bad health.

The Attorney General has received a telegram from the U. S. Marshal of the southern district of Alabama, saying that a mob of fifty persons had driven a number of families out of their homes in Coates county, Ala. Most of them fled into Mississippi, and left their homes, crops and cattle unguarded. The Attorney General replied that the facts stated did not constitute a case calling for Federal interference. He suggested, however, that the matter be reported to the State authorities for such action as they deem necessary.

The President is not expected to return to the White House until the 20th inst., and Mr. Blaine's return is indefinite.
It is said at the bureau of printing and engraving that the recent trouble between the knights of labor and that bureau has been settled, but only because the knights abandoned their ground, and agreed to work in accordance with the old rules of the bureau.

Cooked to Death

PETERBOROUGH, Ont., Sept.—A shocking affair has just come to light here. A two-year old child belonging to a couple living in this place was taken with a fit, and the old fashioned remedy of hot water was tried. The water not being sufficiently warm, a pan containing the child was put on a hot stove, and either through carelessness or ignorance, the child was slowly cooked. The child was finally snatched from the stove by a neighbor but it was then beyond all hope of recovery.

All persons to whom she applied for aid repudiated her.

The feeling between the Vatican and the Quirinal, in Rome, is increasing in bitterness, and the opinion is gaining in ecclesiastical circles that the next Pope must be a foreigner. The Osservatore Romano, in an article which is regarded as written for the purpose of paving the way for the holding of a conclave abroad, says that the departure of the Pope from Rome is quite possible if the general situation in Italy becomes worse.

The czar is said to be much irritated by the appearance of another anti-son of his late father, following him even to his rest at Copenhagen. The czar has never taken kindly to his natural brothers and sisters, whose existence he makes no concealment of regarding as a stigma on the imperial house of Russia, being himself a man of strict morality in his family relations. The latest applicant for recognition, therefore, although no doubt genuine, is not likely to get much for his pains.

An Escape from Siberia.

The harrowing descriptions of the sad fate of the prisoner in Siberia given by Mr. Kennan, are amply confirmed, says the Berlin correspondent of the London News, by a Russian named Jacob Koton, who has escaped from Siberia and is now in Breslau. The substance of his story is as follows: He was the son of a well-to-do miller in Russia. In 1883, in the year 1883 Koton, then nineteen years of age, took part in the Polish insurrection, and in a skirmish near his native place he received a severe gunshot wound in the left foot and was taken prisoner by the Russians. He was thereupon transported to Vilna and condemned by General Muraviev to exile for life in Siberia. At Tarbagat, to which the exile was taken, he was obliged to get his living by hunting. He soon became homesick in this fearful wilderness, the climate of which was killing him, and defying all dangers he made an attempt to escape, but was seized at Tomsk and sentenced to three months' arrest in a fortress. A second attempt brought him to Moscow, a third to Grodno.

Six months and finally a year's imprisonment in a fortress were his punishments, and each time he was transported back to Tarbagat. Koton now—at least for a time—gave up all further attempts to escape, and worked hard to save a sum of money in order then to try his luck again. In the spring of the year 1888 the exile had saved about 4000 roubles, the fruit of twenty five years' work as a hunter, and now he again thought of escaping. On a dark night he left Tarbagat, went from one culvert to the other, far from high roads. After a dangerous and fearful journey of several months, which cost him nearly the whole of his fortune, and after crossing the Ural and gaining Ekaterinburg and St. Petersburg, he at last reached Stockholm via Helsingfors. But, finding no assistance anywhere, he went to Copenhagen, Lubbock, Hamburg, Berlin, and from there to Paris. Here his money ran short, and the French government sent him across the border either by the coast or to the German frontier after marches of many long weeks. Then, traveling via Cologne, Munich and Vienna, he at last reached Breslau.

It is also announced that at the same time Mr. Slater's son, Samuel, will wed Miss Mabel's elder sister, Edith. There will be a complicated relationship in the Slater family.

The Roads.

To the Editor of the Alexandria Gazette:

I am glad to see that you are calling attention to the necessity of good roads in our State. The best way to induce people to settle among us is to have good roads and such that are in good condition all the year. The great fault is with the laws.

In our country (Fairfax) we are compelled to work two days each year or pay a fine of 75cts. per day. Now everyone knows that but little work can be done in that short time and what is done is only half done at that. I have worked all day long on the road shoveling sand out of a ditch into the road and a few days later rain has washed it all back again.

The overseers wait till late in the fall and call out the force and work a few hundred yards and this is all that is done till the next year, and while the present laws are in force it is all that will be done. Now why can't we have such a law as I am told they have in Maryland? Let the road taxes go to the roads, and see that they do. Put the work out at contract to the lowest responsible bidder, pay him the tax money and as much more as is necessary to give him one or two men as help, and let him keep the roads in order and be responsible, by his bond for doing so. The authorities don't seem to care if we have bridges or not. They are put at unimportant places, where but few people use and at the most important places they say they are not needed. Such is the case at Cameron run crossing on the Telegraph road. This road has more travel over it than any leading to your city and we poor country devils can get that far after a heavy storm and there we have to stop, in sight of the city, or go around several miles over a horrid road to the bridge over Hunting Creek. Keep up your good work, Mr. Editor, and perhaps in the dim distant future we may see good roads and bridges also in this section. FAIRFAX.

MONEY AND COMMERCIAL.

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—The stock market continues to show a decreasing volume of business, and at the opening this morning the trading was only moderate. The market was still bearish, however, and first prices were from 1/4 to 1/2 per cent. lower than last night's figures. Further concessions of small fractions were made in the leading active stocks, but the general list displayed an advancing tendency. Among the low priced shares, the Chesapeake and Ohio were remarkably strong, and the first preferred rose 2 1/2 to 5 1/2%. The later dealings were marked by no feature of interest and at 11 o'clock the market was comparatively quiet and steady with prices generally at a shade better than first figures.

ALEXANDRIA MARKET, Sept. 3.—The market to-day is quiet. There is no change in Flour. Wheat is 1c lower, and sales are made at 60 1/2 for common to prime. Corn is quiet at 60 1/2. There is no change in Rye or Oats.
